

COSMOKRATOR NEWSLETTER 2011

© Asia Haleem

Even though I knew I would not be able to service it properly until I had left the day job, this website was put up five years ago to put its foundations in place and make the 3-D zodiac model available. I am now free to start a conversation with you through an occasional newsletter, and I look forward to your comments back to me on asia@cosmokrator.com.

I have had several offers from shops to include Cosmokrator in their stock, which I have resisted, since I would prefer knowledge about it to spread gradually by word of mouth. If you have liked the model, please tell your friends about it, or give one to them as a present!

I am pretty sure that those who have bought Cosmokrator (Cosmo for short) have constructed it, loved looking at it, but then not applied it to their lives. There are several hurdles, the first being to read the material on the website and understand how to use it - at a very basic level to start with, amongst friends – it couldn't be easier. Then every year there is a booklet which expands on its intellectual and practical potential along different disciplines – an ideal curriculum for children in junior school, repeatable at a raised level at both high school and then university – and finally it provides permanent keys to Life itself, for ever and ever.

The next barrier to overcome for those new to astrology is really to learn the symbols for the planets and signs. Become a child again and write a line of Venuses, a line of Jupiters, a line of Leos – and so on – so they start to become automatic and speak to you like any other alphabet. It is worth spending the time (not long) because they are used in the written material and not always spelt out as words!

Perhaps the greatest barrier to using Cosmo is that those already well-versed in astrology will have stopped in their tracks fairly soon on realising that I have not followed the tradition where (other than the Sun ruling Leo and the Moon Cancer) one planet is the governing influence (the Ruler) of two signs:

Thus:

Mars traditionally rules not only Aries, but also Scorpio

Jupiter traditionally rules not only Sagittarius, but also Pisces

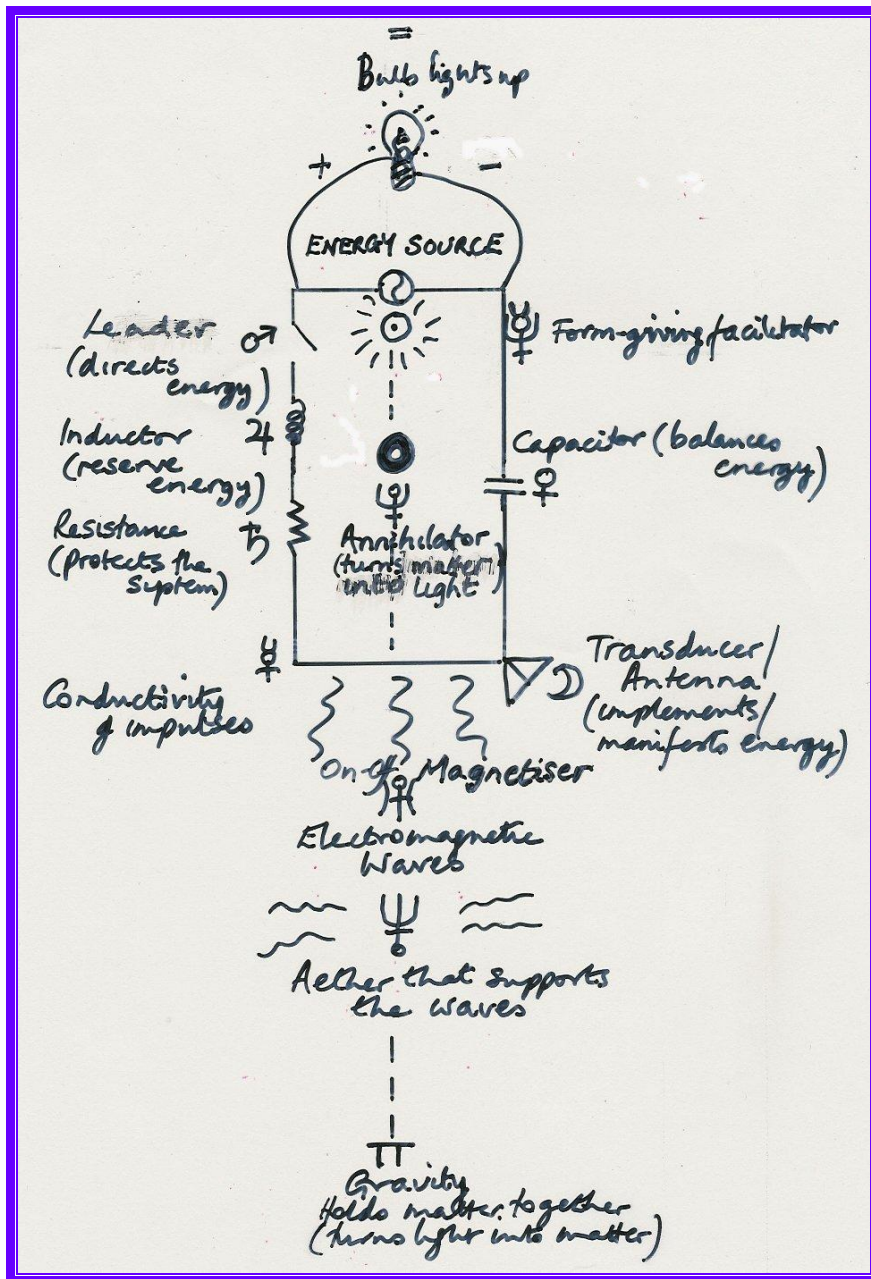

Venus traditionally rules not only Libra, but also Taurus

Saturn traditionally rules not only Capricorn, but also Aquarius

Mercury traditionally rules not only Gemini but also Virgo

Following implicit references in the well-known San Francisco astrologer Linda Goodman's work (to information learned from Charles Musès) though she did not actually take the step of upsetting the apple cart as I am doing - I have reinstated to their rightful places planets that went out of use in the Christian era, which saw the Death of the Gods. This means we now have a set of up-to-date concordances, chiming in perfectly with ancient world practice, where one planet rules one sign.

Charles Musès once summed up for me the character of the planetary energies in relation to the Energy Circuit of the Universe, as below (where the bulb is Earth!). I find it useful, and i hope you will.

As we are on the brink of the Age of Aquarius I believe we should try now to put this system to use, since it is infinitely more subtle and accurate when it comes to interpreting horoscopes and events. Here are the changes:

Mars traditionally rules Aries - while the true ruler of Scorpio is Pluto

Jupiter traditionally rules Sagittarius - while the true ruler of Pisces is Neptune

Venus traditionally rules Libra - while the true ruler of Taurus is Pan (on the outer edge of the Solar System, standing also for the entire planetary system taken together as one body of influence)

Saturn traditionally rules Capricorn - while the true ruler of Aquarius is Uranus

Mercury traditionally rules Gemini - while the true ruler of Virgo is Vulcan (even closer to the Sun than Mercury, Vulcan the Shaman God is described with a hip out of joint, or disabled in other ways from being so close to the Sun, standing for the power behind the Universe brought it into a physically formed Creation)

This information is summarised and contrasted in the table above. The Exaltation signs for the reintroduced planets have not yet been assigned – we need to have more case histories before we can be sure of astrological practice here.

What this information means is that actually people new to astrology will find it easier to take it up than astrologers with traditional training who will find it hard to reprogramme their minds. They probably won't have a problem about the reallocation of Pluto, Neptune and Uranus, but will drag their feet when it comes to Pan and Vulcan. Yet they ring so true. Pan is the surge of Life Energy within the world of nature, so well embodied in the virile Bull, whilst Vulcan is the God of Making Things, rather than Thinking Things as Mercury does.

Releasing Pan in people's horoscopes points to those with an all-encompassing view of life – people who are not limited by family, race, religion or nationality (they are international citizens who serve Nature or support the world through farming). Releasing Vulcan in people's horoscopes validates all those people who have a bent not only towards DIY or home hobbies involving sewing or making models, but also the millions who work in the large-scale manufacturing and building industries, earning their living by the things they make. World society absolutely rests on the efforts of those people with a strong Pan or Vulcan.
